

CASTLE IS FREE; HIS WIFE IN JAIL.

Sentence of Three Months Imposed Upon the Unfortunate Woman.

Powerful Influence May Effect
Her Speedy Release from Prison.

Physicians Testified at the Trial That She Was Mentally Irresponsible for Her Actions.

PLEADED GUILTY TO ALL CHARGES.

Prosecution Counsel Asked for Castle's Release, as There Was No Evidence to Connect Him with the Many Thefts.

By Julian Ralph.
London, Nov. 6.—The Judge who sentenced Mrs. Castle to three months' imprisonment this morning deserved a share of the sympathy which all Americans ex-

Mrs. Castle be removed, and the Judge said that her husband might go with her to the cells if he desired. The poor woman was helped to her feet and disappeared down what appeared to be a hole in the floor of the dock.

Sir Frank paid a high tribute to the personal character of Mr. Castle, who presently appeared, standing on the court room floor outside of the dock.

The whole proceedings seemed perfunctory and mechanical. This was especially the case when Mr. Avory opened the trial with a summary of the evidence against the woman. He talked in a halfhearted, nervous manner. He told of a whole museum of valuable curios that had been stolen by her, of her skill as a shoplifter, and of her refraining from theft whenever she had been closely watched.

Not Responsible for Her Acts.

Sir Edward Clarke then argued that Mrs.
Castle must have been insane, because she had no need to steal. He said that she was the victim of certain female troubles, and at the age of fifteen had had to be sent away from home on this account.
A recurrence of the disease had been recently brought on by a severe cold, since when she had not been responsible for her actions.

Three doctors were put on the stand to testify for the prisoner, and all declared her not responsible for her actions, and said that to put her in prison would be liable to unsettle her reason.

One of the physicians was Dr. Scott, of Holloway prison, who produced an official report sent to the Home Office a month ago, in which he said:

"I am told that Mrs. Castle suffers from a Pentonville Prison, in London, to serve there as much of her sentence as may be and to await whatever action the Home Office may take.

Immediately after the case had been closed the Castles' counsel prepared a memorial to the Home Office asking for clemency.
The memorial was signed by all the counsel and also by those of the consulting Magistrates who were in favor of acquittal.
It is possible also that the convicting and sentencing Magistrates also joined in the petition. They were bound to act on Mrs.
Castle's plea of guilty.

The American Embassy this afternoon sent to the Home Office a letter asking that all possible clemency be extended to the unfortunate woman, and I am assured that the Embassy will do everything in its power to aid her.

Mrs. Castle will undoubtedly be placed in the hospital at Pentonville, a most unusual consideration being shown in her case.

LEE SEES THE PRESIDENT.

Supplements an Official report With a Brief Review of the Rebellion in Cuba.

Washington, Nov. 6.—Consul-General Lee called at the State Department about 11 o'clock this morning and held a lengthy conference with Secretary Olney.

Subsequently the Secretary and General Lee went over to the White House, where they saw the President. General Lee briefly reviewed the course of the insurrection in Cuba and arranged for an interview with the President at a later date, when he will give a full account of the actions of the Spanish Government in the island, calcu-

ESCHERT'S ELECTION BET.

For Once in His Life the Professor Let the Band Lead and the Bowery Played Horse with His Dignity.

Ordinarily Professor Charles Eschert, leader of the orchestra at the Atlantic Garden, on the Bowery, lives up to the duties of his position and leads the band seated on a chair. Yesterday he followed the band, seated on a horse. The band led him from City Hall Park to Ruppert's brewery, at Ninety-first street and Third avenue, and he followed it to pay an election bet.

Shortly before the election Professor Eschert, who is an enthusiastic Democrat, made a bet with Charles Doelger, the son of the brewer. By the conditions of the bet the loser was to ride a horse, hitched to a buggy, driven by the winner, over the route named above. It was stipulated that the horse was not to be saddled, and, to make the bet binding, the papers were drawn up by Counselor Thomas Dinneen, Eschert lost.

The start was made from City Hall Park at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Both Es-chert and the ground early. Doelger appeared in a nice buggy, drawn by a frisky black horse. Accompanying him was a big wagon containing Professor Eschert, who was a Sicilian Brass Band and a F. Mantresinger carrying the following 17th avenue spectators: Alfred Kraus, interested Kraus, Anthony Doelger, Dr. William Charles Abraham, Dr. Albert Doelger, De Fina, Benjamin Charles Kugler, Peter Foreman. Some of the spectators were defeated among the jocularly interested in the white chrysanthemum as big as a head of cabbage. He paid for the band, chrysanthemum, gold men wore yellow flowers.

Professor Eschert mounted the horse and the parade got away promptly on this.
Professor Eschert wore full dress, black spat, a Broughmian diamond and a sweater under his shirt. He smoked a cigar and made an effort to appear at ease.
The novel parade started up Park row, and everybody in sight started after it. By the time it reached Chatham Square the cable line was blocked. The first stop was made at Atlantic Garden, where the crowd on the coach went inside and loquered up.
The professor remained out in the street in his lonesome equestrian glory, and the crowd heaped continually upon him.

The repertoire of the band was limited to three airs: "Marching Through Georgia,"
"The Red, White and Blue" and "The New Bully." To the air of "Marching Through Georgia," the crowd sang:
Hoory! hoory! we shout the too-a-loo:
Hoory! hoory! we shout the too-a-loo:
It's an even bet that Eschert feels like a kidney steak.

At Ruppert's there was a lunch and an ocean of beer. Professor Eschert made a speech with deep feeling and then sat down on his new horse. Last night his understudy led the orchestra at Atlantic Garden.

Menace to Long Island Sound Lines.
Stonington, Conn., Nov. 6.—A big section of the schooner Maggie A. Abbott's hull, which floated away from the wreck yesterday when the latter broke up on Watch Hill Reef, drifted off to the westward, and late last night was reported in Fisher's Island Sound. The wreckage is sufficiently large to prove dangerous to shipping. Conditions were favorable to carry it well into the path of the Long Island Sound lines.

EVIDENCE AGAINST IVORY

Alleged Dynamiter Listens to More Test mony Taken at Bow Street.

London, Nov. 6.—Edward J. Ivory, alias Edward Bell, the alleged Irish-American dynamiter, was again arraigned for examination in the Bow Street Police Court this morning. Sir Victor Majendie, Chief Inspector of Explosives under the Home Office, testified to having examined the brass apparatus seized by the British police agents in the lodgings of Kearney and Ivory were alleged accomplices of a familiar dynamiter in Rotterdam. It was namely a device designed to explode dynamite by means of a detonator fitted an apparatus charged with a fulminate.

Police Inspector Walsh said that he had recognized as Tyuan a man calling himself Garth at the Hotel Angliani, in Antwerp, and that communications were found in the possession of Tyuan signed by Ivory under the name of Bell.

The prisoner was further remanded.

Professor Eschert Pays His Election Bet.

Professor Charles Eschert bet Charles Doelger that Bryan would be elected President. The Professor lost.
In consequence, yesterday he rode an unsaddled horse from the City Hall to Ninety-first street and Third avenue behind a band that was seated in a wagon. Jeering spectators greeted the unique procession throughout the journey.

tend to both the unfortunate Californians.
He felt his position almost as keenly as did they. His feelings were written deep in his face.

Castle is a free man. The sentence imposed upon his wife means very much or very little, according to the prospective action of the Home Office. It can discharge her on the ground of her mental condition, or it can ignore the case altogether and let her serve out her term.

Every one interested in this extraordinary case may be perfectly sure that the pressure brought to bear upon the Government will prove tremendously powerful when fully exerted.

The House of Sessions of Clerkwell is the court at which the Castles were brought to the bar to-day. It is a quaint, windowless room, like a big, shallow well, with a gaslight at the top and the walls hidden behind terraced seats, like flights of stairs, on all four sides.

Mrs. Castle Brought In.
On both sides of Judge McConnell were many magistrates, called in to confer with him. At the close of the evidence Mrs.
Castle was led in weeping with paroxysmal rushes of deep grief, blended with terror, he was all in black, except for a thread of white linen at her throat. Both hands held a white handkerchief to her swollen face.

Walter M. Castle, in his familiar business suit, stood, while his wife sat at his side.
His head was held high and he met the concentrated gaze of the court gathering with honest firmness.

The clerk read, one at a time, the seven charges of theft and asked each prisoner what he or she had to say.

"Guilty," Pleads the Woman.
Sir Edward Clarke spoke for the woman.
"She pleads guilty," he said, "and later I will explain why."

Castle answered boldly "not guilty" as each charge was read.
Mr. Avory, for the Government, then announced that he held no evidence against Mr. Castle. He felt convinced, he said, that there was nothing against him not consistent with his innocence. The Judge said that he had arrived at the same conclusion from reading the evidence in the lower court. He then warned the jury that they must return a verdict of not guilty, so that in another minute Mr. Castle was declared a free man.

Sir Frank Lockwood then asked that trouble which may have affected her mentally. She is highly nervous and unstable, and is liable to commit eccentric actions unless well looked after by friends."

Arguments Without Avail.

Sir Edward Clarke said he hoped Mrs.
Castle's friends would be allowed to take her where she might be quiet and recover herself, and impressed on the Judge's mind the united testimony of the physicians and the serious consequences of imprisonment.

The Judge then retired, followed by a long line of conferring magistrates.
I then went down on the crowded floor and sought Castle's side, but found it idle to try to talk to him. He could think or talk of nothing but his wife's fate. His own release was as nothing to him then.

Presently the Judge and all the magistrates filed back. Mrs. Castle having been brought back to the room to hear her fate.
The Judge cleared his throat and said:

"Ella Castle, you stand convicted of felony in seven cases. The Court has great difficulty in dealing with a matter in which sympathy is so powerful as almost to interfere with justice. But the Court knows that this sympathy will be well weighed elsewhere, and if your sentence causes any danger to your life or sanity, that consideration will be well weighed.

"The sentence of the Court is that you be imprisoned, without hard labor, for three calendar months."

Overcome by the Sentence.
Mrs. Castle sprang to her feet. Mr. Castle forced his way to the dock, and all in the same instant the prisoners lost her self-control. She fell back into the arms of a giant policeman, and in another minute she shrieked:

"Oh! my God! What does it mean?
What does it mean?"

At least two persons pressed handkerchiefs against her face to stifle her with all tenderness, and the little group of prisoner and friends descended into the mysterious hold in the floor.

Speedy Release in Prospect.
This ends the principal crisis in the most extraordinary case known in Europe for years.

Everywhere, however, I hear expressed the same opinion—that Mrs. Castle will be released within three days.
Mrs. Castle was taken to Holloway later this afternoon, and Mr. Castle secured the unusual privilege of an interview with her.
To-morrow she will probably be taken to
